Authority

We all are baptized into Christ: priest, prophet, and king. The International Theological Commission on the sensus fidei quotes St John: 'You have been anointed by the Holy One, and all of you have knowledge', 'the anointing that you received from [Christ] abides in you, and so you do not need anyone to teach you', 'his anointing teaches you about all things' (1Jn 2:20, 27). Many lay people have been astonished during the preparation of this Synod to find that they are listened to for the first time. They had doubted their own authority and asked, 'Can I really offer something?' But it is not just the laity who lack authority. The whole Church is afflicted by a crisis of authority.

Our whole world is suffering a crisis of authority. All institutions have lost authority. Politicians, the law, the press have all felt authority draining away. Authority always seems to belong to other people: either dictators who are coming into power in many places, or the new media, or celebrities and influencers. The world hungers for voices that will speak with authority about the meaning of our lives. So how may the Church recover authority and speak to our world which hungers for voices that ring true? Luke tells us that when Jesus taught, 'they were astounded at his teaching, because he spoke with authority.' (Luke 4.32). He commands the demons and they obey. Even the wind and sea obey him. He even has the authority to summon his dead friend to life: 'Lazarus, come out.' (John 11.43). Almost the final words of Matthew's gospel: 'All authority in heaven and on earth is given to me.' Authority is multiple and mutually enhancing. There need be no competition, as if the laity can only have more authority if the bishops have less, or so-called conservatives compete for authority with progressives. In the Trinity, there is no rivalry. We shall speak with authority to our lost world if in this Synod we transcend competitive ways of existing. Then the world will recognise the voice of the shepherd who summons them to life. (Synopsis based on the Synod Retreat meditation by Father Timothy Radcliffe). Fr. Saju
